The game
You are in charge of protecting personal data in your company.
Winning? It is possible, but the most important part is learning while having fun.

Game setup
Print the boardgame, get a die and a different marker for each player (it can be a button, soda cap or another small object).

How to play
The player who rolls the highest number goes first. Turn order goes clockwise.
First player rolls the die again and moves the marker the amount of spaces.
If a player lands on a square with an action/description (blue or red), he or she must do as stated.
If a player lands on the square “miss a turn”, he or she will miss the next turn and have to wait for the following one to keep playing.
Two or more players can land on the same square simultaneously.
The players can decide if they must roll the exact number to get to the finish line or not.
If so, if the player rolls a number higher than the required to reach “finish”, he or she must move forward and then back, according to the number on the die, and wait for the next turn to try again, until he or she is able to roll the right number to reach the finish line.

Winning the game
The first player to reach “finish” is the winner.

Did you know?
The cases presented in the game are inspired by best practices involving data protection and the Brazilian Data Protection Law, known as LGPD, which is the new Brazilian law that regulates the processing of personal data in order to protect rights and freedoms of data subjects.
Some of the situations of the game were also inspired by real cases that resulted in investigations and/or penalties from data protection authorities around the world.

What is LGPD Acadêmico?
It is a nonprofit initiative, carried out by a group of volunteers from all over Brazil, passionate about privacy and data protection, working towards the same goal: to learn and share.

LGPD - the game - was developed to raise awareness and enable the assimilation of some of the LGPD concepts in a fun way.
Learn and raise awareness while playing!
